Your December Gardening Checklist

The National Allotment Society

Dear Members,

The nights are longer, the air is crisp, and December invites a quieter, more reflective pace on the allotment. It's the month to protect your soil from frost, shelter any remaining tender crops, and ensure stored harvests stay safe and usable through winter. You can also plan for next year's sowing, tidy up spent plants, and provide food and shelter for wildlife during the coldest weeks.

Read on for your December to-do list and top tips to keep your plot healthy, resilient, and ready for a productive new growing season.
